TOPIC -----

How do I manage file sharing on a large network?

DISCUSSION -----

File sharing is managed by each Macintosh user who has enabled it. Management involves all users naming their Macintosh computers with the Sharing Setup control panel, creating users and groups with which to share (if desired), and controlling access to the shared folders. The individual file sharing user performs these tasks.

It's a good idea for each network administrator to give each user guidelines regarding naming conventions and setting appropriate access privileges for sharing information.
