- For technical accuracy.

TOPIC -----

In the Finder, pop-up menus provide another shortcut for quickly moving around your desktop.

DISCUSSION -----

To access the pop-up menu of the active window, simultaneously:

- hold down the Command key,
- put the pointer over the name at the top of the window, and
- press the mouse button.

The pop-up menu not only shows you the path of the active window, but if you choose a folder from the pop-up menu, the system makes that window active. If the window is not already open, it opens and is made active.

To simultaneously choose a new window to open and to close the currently active window, hold down the Option key as well as the Command key.
